UNEASY FEELING STILL PREVAILS

Wall Street Not Satisfied With Appearance of Things on Cotton Market.

SITUATION IS NOT CLEAR

ELEMENTS OF DEPRESSION IN IRON AND STEEL TRADE.

New York, April 30 .- The stock market today reflected a recurrence of uneasiness over the cotton market situa-tion and also lacked the sustaining force of the demand from shorts, owing to large reduction of the short interest effected yesterday and which was the cause of the raily in prices then. Some sensational rumors were in circulation regarding the action of the so-called cotton pool and the consequences which might be involved in carrying on the speculative position in that article. The enormous deliveries of May cotton, of which notices were filed yesterday to the extent of 175,000 bales, indicate the heavy liabilities at stake.

The tone of the mercantile reviews did not serve to clear up the uncertainty felt over the business prospects and the blowing out of additional stacks by iron furnaces kept attention focused on the iron trade recession. Reports of cancellation of orders for railroad equipment by some of the im-portant western railroad systems suggested further elements of depression in the branches of the iron and steel trade. The influence of the proposed trade. The influence of the proposed increase in freight rates by western railroad systems seemed to have passed away today and there was revived discussion also of the effect of the damage to crops. A decline in discount rates in the London and Berlin money markets was a feature of the day and foreign exchange rates here showed a yielding The bank statement showed clearly the necessity the banks had been under of scaling down their credits in order to conserve the reserve within the legal requirement. Actual cash holdings decreased some $13,500,000, the trust companies having taken over some cash in connection with the extension of their loan account. Bonds were easy. The effect of this depletion of reserves was somewhat minimized by a contraction of $7,767,700 in loans and a decrease of $20,844,600 in deposits. The latter, of course, lessened reserve requirements by about 5,500,000. The decrease in surplus reserve compared with the previous week was $8,205,350, the surplus on Saturday standing at $4,182,550. This showing, in view of the loss of something like $14,800,000 in gold during the past few ays must be set down as favorable The statement of averages issued Saturday did not include the operations described, and based on the system of averages the surplus reserve figured out $6,771,150.
